VOLUME XIV. CHICAGO, TUESDAY, AUGUST 7, 1860. NUMBER 32.

Press & Tribune.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 7, 1860.

THE ELECTIONS YESTERDAY. Our information from Missouri is too meagre to warrant conjecture as to the result.

For some unaccountable reason we could obtain nothing last evening from St. Louis, whither all eyes are turned with great solicitude.

The returns from Kentucky indicate the election of Gen. Leslie Coombs (Union candidate) to the office of Clerk of the Appeals.

GARIBALDI CONCERT. We are glad to see that a demonstration is to be made in Chicago which, while it will express the opinion of the city in relation to Garibaldi's heroic efforts for Italian freedom, will be the means of adding a tribe to his military cash-box. The public opinion of this country must be greatly misunderstood in Europe if the sympathies of the Catholic priesthood and laity to any party, in any cause, [illegible] Yet we hope that it will be so regarded, and that, in spite of Douglas, Slavery and Democracy, the oppressed of the Old World may learn that Liberty still has her worshippers in America.

MORE COMPLAINTS. We are in receipt of two communications, each of which is signed "A Douglas Democrat," complaining of the manner in which the Times and Herald is conducted, and demanding the publication in Chicago of the Douglas paper. We do not print either of them, for the reason that they do not differ materially from one that appeared in our columns on Saturday, and because the journals of the Democrats are masters in which we have no concern. Lincoln, unquestionably, has a clear majority of all the voters in the State, and it matters little whether the Slave Democracy quarrel or keep the peace.

FORD COUNTY.

Splendid Demonstration.

(Special Dispatch to the Press and Tribune.)

PAXTON, FORD CO., August 6—8 M.

On short notice, we have just had a most successful Republican Mass Meeting. The crowd, assembled in a nice grove near the town. Hon. Owen Lovejoy made then a most eloquent and convincing speech. Great enthusiasm was manifested by the people. The numbers present were not less than 1,500, which, considering the hot weather and the thinly settled character of the country heretofore, is a very large turnout.

PAXTON.

Squatter Fizzle at Moline.

MOLINE, Aug. 6, 11 M.

The Squatter meeting held here to-day was a slim affair. There were only 500 persons present, including women, children and Republicans. Considering the effort made to procure an imposing demonstration that would carry terror to the Republicans, the meeting was a complete failure. The speeches were as poor and trashy as the crowd was insignificant. The thing was a fizzle, and the poor, "don't care" Squatters fled down in the dumps.

WIDE-AWAKE.

The Texas Products.

MOBILE, ALA., July 28, 1860.

Editor Press and Tribune:

I judge of the manner in which you speak of Blunt and McKinney that you saw laboring under a mistake with regard to them. Mr. Blunt, (William is the first name), lives in this county and was at my house last night. I have been personally acquainted with him seventeen years, and I would inform you that he is a pro slavery man, and has been from his childhood advocating the rights and the Bible sanction of slavery.

I would like to give you a history of the Texas affair, as given by himself, but I have not time to do so. Blunt and McKinney are Illinois (Campbellite) preachers and are Republicans and are both pro slavery men and known as such in Texas. Blunt has not been in Texas within the last six months.

THOMAS I. LESLEY.

Douglas's Chickens Coming Home to Roost.

It turns out that three of the most prominent Douglas men in the State of Alabama, John Tarvith, Buckalew and Parsons, voted for the $200,000 military resolutions passed by the last Legislature, and now Douglas is referred to by the Douglas speakers in the North as evidence of the dissatisfaction prevailing in Southern States.

What are we to infer from this? That at the time of their passage, Mr. Douglas expected to be re-nominated and elected by the Southern States.

THE CITY.

Auction Sales this Morning.

Household Furniture, Carpets, Bedsteads and Washstands, at Crosby's Auction Rooms, at 9 o'clock.

THE WEATHER yesterday was warm. Thermometer 102 in the shade in the middle of the afternoon. Refreshed by the breezes.

☞ If our correspondent T. F. B. will invest five cents in the compaign edition of the Life of Lincoln, issued from this office, he will find the inquiries he proposed fully answered.

MILITARY EXCURSIONS—The Shields Guard, in their new uniforms, took an excursion to Lake Forest yesterday. The Highland Guard have their excursion on the 16th instant, to Evanston.

"LINCOLN."—Messrs. Brown & Widder of Nos. 47 and 49 State street, finished yesterday and sent to Springfield last evening, a large and very handsome combination of gas-burners, giving the word "Lincoln." It is to be erected over the door of the Wigwam in Springfield.

THE ZOUAVES.—The Zouaves were in Cincinnati yesterday and were visiting Lookout Grove. They are expected at Springfield to-morrow, and will reach Chicago on Thursday morning. Also from Springfield they go to St. Louis.

LOOK OUT FOR HIM.—A man about six feet high, thin faced, light complexioned, slightly pock-marked, hailing from St. Louis has boarded the city for some days in the disreputable strand of hunting runaway niggers. Would not object to kidnap a likely boy or two, probably.

HON. LAKE SUPERIOR.—All that ice can do to preserve the perishables and to temperate cooling breezes of the upper lake will be well to the up a hackkerchief-full of wardrobe, and take themselves on board the steamer Lady Elgin, which clears for the hyperborean regions this evening. All aboard for Mackinaw and Lake Superior.

POLICE.—Jacob Irwin was arrested yesterday on complaint of a little girl about eleven years of age, who charges him with criminal intercourse. The complainant is an adopted daughter of the prisoner. During her examination she had a fit, and the case was sent before the Grand Jury of the Recorder's Court for further investigation. A young man named David Jones, alias Daniel Dicher, was brought up for larceny of a set of furs at No. 120 Canal street.

MEDICAL SOCIETY.—For Press and Tribune.—The Chicago Medical Society will hold their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, the 7th inst., at 11 o'clock P. M., at the office of Dr. O. Wood, 173 South Clark street. A general and full attendance is requested, as business of importance to the society will come before the meeting, and the investigations and discussions will be of more than usual interest to the profession and community.

THE "PANOPTICON."—D. L. La Rue's "Panoptikon," being a life moving mechanical exhibition of the big lot of Indian and Slave Sepoy rebellion, will be opened to the public at Kingsbury Hall next Wednesday evening. This display of art is represented to embrace a complete collection of 80,000 moving and acting models of men, horses and animals. It is not a panorama, but a mechanical contrivance, in which, from out the between armies, etc., are represented as taking place.

CHANGES HANDS.—We learn that the "Mechanics Institute" passed out of the hands of its stockholders, and into those of the Council, a few days since, and will become private property. We understand it is the intention of those interested to convert it into a first class school for young ladies. We have noticed this heretofore but believing when speaking of the success of Mechanics Institute, that it was a well adapted for a boarding school.

BANNER PRESENTATION.—A beautiful banner was presented to the West Side Avenue of Wide Awake Market Hall last evening by Solomon M. Wilson, Esq. The banner, which is an exceedingly neat and "Wide Awake" affair, was made by Mr. W., and gotten up by Messrs. Chambers & Sanborn. It represents "Old Abe," a very good and lifelike portrait, with a Rail Splitter on one side and a Wide Awake on the other. It is surmounted by a large kerosene torch, smaller torches depending from either end of the crossbeam.

THE NIC IN WINCOM'S GROVE.—The Sabbath Schools in connection with the Reformed Presbyterian Church of this city intended holding a picnic in Wincom's Grove, on Thursday, 9th inst. As this place is just outside of the city limits and access lies by the horse-railroad on Wabash avenue, and the cars will be crowded, the Committee have concluded to change the place of meeting to Ogden's Grove, on the Cottage Grove avenue, and have so notified the Superintendent of the Railroad.

The Great Excursion Train. The great excursion train on the Illinois Central Railroad, to leave this city at 8 o'clock to-night for the grand State Republican rally at Springfield, will probably be one of the most marked features of this campaign; from present promise it will be the largest company that has ever gone in a single excursion by rail in the Northwest.

It is especially desired that all who are intending to go, be prompt at the depot to couple season, as the train will leave promptly on time. This great turnout is reminding some of our older Republican residents of Whig proclivities of the campaign of 1840, the "Old Tippecanoe times" when an excursion for that day usually large with this of to-night, turned out three hundred strong and its wagons took up their march for the Capitol, camping out by the way at night. They made about thirty-five miles progress daily, and had a big time at Springfield. A number of those who twenty years ago thus passed several days on the route to Springfield will be on board this train to-night.

The train will reach Springfield on Thursday morning. John Wright, the celebrated restaurateur of this city, will accompany the excursion with a car fitted up for good feeding, and which will not give out by the way nor at Springfield.

On the Alton and St. Louis road trains will run as advertised. Also from Bloomington and Alton special excursion trains will be run, to return from Springfield after the Wigwam meeting on Wednesday evening.

Meeting of the Chicago Gardeners' Society.

The regular monthly meeting of this Society took place last evening, at their Hall in Metropolitan Block. The attendance was not large but the meeting was of great interest.

A proposition was received from the Mechanics' Institute, for the Society to unite with them in their forthcoming exhibition. As the terms of union were not specified, the matter was referred to a committee, with the officers of the Institute and report to the next meeting.—Messrs. Sanders, Boissig and Abbott were the committee.

Mr. Parrium of Calumet, read an interesting paper on the Cot Worm, which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. Sanders was appointed to investigate the habits of the Rose Leaf, with a view to identifying those found on fruit and forest trees. Also of the Sap-sucker, and report at an early day.

Mr. Chase was appointed to investigate the habits of the Quail and report on its economic value to horticulturalists and agricultural skills.

The question, the society adjourned to meet on Saturday next, at 3 o'clock, to consider the propositions of the Mechanics' Institute if any be presented, and other business.

For Springfield.

It may be found that a bushel of sandwiches for each man will not be a bad thing to have at Springfield to-morrow. Pity the poor boy or society of provender, but if the expectations of our Springfield friends are realized, hons and lionesses will be in great demand in Springfield before night to-morrow, as principles in the Democratic party—at any time. Take a basket of chips you, because, Illinois will be in the purveyor of this party, it is well to provide against the expected famine.

The Forthcoming Fair. The entry books of the Mechanics' Exhibition at the Wigwam, are now open at the rooms of the Mechanics' Institute, 122 Clark street. We learn that the Institute is in a most flourishing state of prosperity in progress among our mechanics, artisans and merchants generally. Preparations for the Mechanics' Exhibition in the Great Wigwam the finest local Fair ever held in the Northwest, are assuming a vigorous and thoroughly efficient shape. Our mechanics are manifesting a lively interest in the great depot yesterday morning in a special excursion train of five cars on the Mich. Cent. R. R. for Niagara Falls and return. They are to leave for Niagara Falls this morning. The period of their period of return to this city is not fixed yet.

INQUESTS.

DEPT OF THIRTY ROD WHEEL.—An inquest was held yesterday by Coroner James, at No. 17 White street, upon the body of a woman named Mrs. Morgan Kean. The husband of deceased, who is a soldier, went to Buffalo three weeks since, leaving his family in charge of a boarder, Mr. Belton. On Sunday evening Mr. B. called in to see her and found her dead in bed, and her two children, twins about five years of age, playing around. They said their mother was asleep, and had been since the day before. The last time she was seen alive was by a neighbor, who called in to see her on Saturday morning. Her husband, who is a soldier, is expected home in a few days. The term is expected hold to clear out the Republican rally and all the Leading Papers of the North West.

Recorder's Court. The Recorders Court came in session yesterday with a full docket of cases. The term is expected hold to clear out the Republican rally, and all the Leading Papers of the North West.

Nothing was done yesterday but to empanel the following

Andrew Cornell, S. B. Walker,
James O. Allen, E. A. Gilbert,
Jno. H. Meyer,

The following is Recorder Wilson's charge to the jury:

CHARGE TO THE GRAND JURY.

Gentlemen of the Grand Jury—The duties you are called upon to perform, often require the exercise of all your intelligence and intellect. In the discharge of the duties, you should have no fear, except that of doing wrong, and no love, except that of your sets more than the approval of your consciences. Indulge or prejudices in no case, and prevented from indulging in the fixed cases for fear some one may be offended, may say that we have been actuated by wrong motives. The best evidence that we have been faithfulness to the public, is that our course is sounded by bad men, who always fear faithful public servants.

Apply the same rule of common sense to whatever you may be called upon to do as jurors, and you will be the faithful public servants as good citizens, and you will always be right.

Whenever any honest man is charged with the commission of a crime he will stand his ground, and at once ask for and demand an investigation of the charge, and will be called upon to take part in administering the laws. Now different when a guilty party is charged with crime. Then all the machinations of the parties cannot be found, every effort made to defeat the ends of justice. Now, if all who would faithfully and orderly examine into the charge, and if the party, or any one charged with being prejudiced and malignified, "Criminals escape" and the ends of justice are ready to say officers and jurors—why if you don't act as good and honest citizens, and of our misdeeds, we will most cheerfully give you a write-down.

Often, very often, are religious, political and personal prejudices and malignities indulged in, evoked, referred to and relied upon be those who are prejudiced and malignified from an investigation to their criminal acts. And you will always find that causing offenders who are others to do their duty in case of crime, and that they are likely to be detected, will set to work to cover up their participation in the crime by causing their instruments to assume all the responsibility, assuming the blame, saying that they than covered their own iniquity, the next step is to destroy the evidence, if possible, all evidence that any officer has been committed by any concerned in the crime, then the party must be packed, if possible, and a corum class of men are gathered together, who, if they thought they may be very innocently called upon to serve their country in a prosecution, and to make the necessary means of warfare—and to complain bitterly against the hard lot of the poor unfortunate serve upon all poor prisoners who have no friends or means of defence.

Gentlemen, you will see that the single individual who goes forth to break the laws is hemmed in and surrounded by a phalanx of men are bonded together, each one to pay his part and to sustain the laws of the country, yet both of these are harmless compared to those who have sworn to protect the laws, and to those who they have sworn to support, and to take any oath of office, and to perform the duties of any sworn to protect.

We all know from past experience how easy it is to cend off by oaths the poor unfortunate criminal, and how difficult it is to get to him those who commit the offence against the laws of the country, and with official authority. This ought not to be so, yet it will not always continue to be so, if every one who is called upon to act, will do his duty, and let no one be shielded by partiality and fearlessness.

I know that it will offendfriends to believe that all who are prejudiced against crime, are guilty of it, and that the only way to escape discomfort is, that they are legally demanded to do their duty. Such is not the case. Honest should prevail, courts and juries will be of little use, and the ends of justice will be defeated, and those holding official station, and any of whom which results in accomplishing the end and allowing the latter to escape, will never be called upon to serve, and the honest and upright would punish the instrument used in the commission of crime, and the party who had instigators to escape is also reprehensible to an extent equally as great.

We have for many years heard and seen much of the Democratic party, and of its great and good qualities, but I am not prepared to go so far as to endorse a Democratic Grand Jury, and other officers of the same party, and allowing the latter to escape, will never be called upon to serve, and the honest and upright would punish the instrument used in the commission of crime, and the party who had instigators to escape is also reprehensible to an extent equally as great.

I am not [illegible] in writing articles for the Press and Tribune, but I feel that I am calculated to call into action the physical rather than the mental powers. I am [illegible] not enter into any war of words with any one [illegible] of the Press and Tribune, [illegible] the head in [illegible] Sanborn, [illegible] an open [illegible] to the public, and [illegible] his shillaleh with a free hand, [illegible] has not from the commencement of his existence and when [illegible] Fred Fitzgerald, replied [illegible] that he would not have so much as to say one to have a little fun if it had been his own father's head. THE ELECTIONS YESTERDAY.

Our information from Missouri is too meagre to warrant a conjecture as to the result.

For some unaccountable reason we could obtain nothing last evening from St. Louis, whither all eyes are turned with great solicitude.

The returns from Kentucky indicate the election of Gen. Leslie Coombs (Union candidate) to the office of Clerk of the Appeals.

GARIBALDI CONCERT.

We are glad to see that a demonstration is to be made in Chicago which, while it will express the opinion of the city in relation to Garibaldi's heroic efforts for Italian freedom, will be the means of adding a trifle to his military coffers. The public opinion of this country must be greatly misunderstood in Europe if the sympathies of the Garibaldi concert will be to any degree in the nature of a "Democratic" affair. We hope that it will be not the original intention, but in spite of Douglas, Slavery and Democracy, the oppressed of the Old World may learn that Liberty still has her worshippers in America.

MORE COMPLAINTS.

We continue to receive of two communications, each of which is signed "A Douglas Democrat," complaining of the manner in which the Times and Herald is conducted, and demanding the application to Chicago of a new Douglas paper. We do not print either of them, for the reason that they do not differ materially from one that appeared in our columns on Saturday, and because the organs of the Democrats are matters in which we have no concern. Lincoln, unquestionably, has a clear majority of all the voters in the State, and it matters little whether the Slam Democracy quarrel or keep the peace.

THE CINCINNATI EMBEZZLEMENT CASE.

Description of the Parties.

[From the Cincinnati Gazette, 6th.]

Considerable excitement was created on Wednesday among business men throughout the city, on Saturday, by the announcement that Chas. H. McDonald, junior partner of the firm of West & McDonald, wholesale merchants and grocers, No. 63 Walnut street, had absconded, in company with Wm. T. Montague, book-keeper for the firm, carrying away $35,000—The embezzlement had been going on a year's business, and stand fair, we believe, with the commercial world, on the list of enterprises was a misfortune never dreamed of. The facts attending the discovery of the robbery and the escape of the parties, are as follows:

On Wednesday last Isaac B. West, senior member of the firm, went to Indiana for the purpose of attending to some business there, not intending to return until Saturday, but intend he came back to the city on Friday, and went to his business house at 12 o'clock in the afternoon. He did not find McDonald at the office, and on inquiring was told by the porter that he had stepped out only a few minutes before and would soon return.

Mr. West sat down, looked over the letters to which, to his surprise, he found many entries. He next inspected the "check" book, the Wright book, the Ledger, and Journal, to see what he could learn. Some of the entries were not in his own handwriting, and neither McDonald nor the book-keeper had authority to do so. In the banking house of A. H. Bensing & Co., and on inquiry found that there was a large balance, which, when his banking book showed a credit of $35,000.

This was enough to set a suspicious man to thinking. Mr. West, of course, at once rode at a brisk speed, to Eighth street, where his partner lived, and was told by a servant that the gentlemen and his lady had gone out to take a carriage ride. Upon this information, for the vacillated partner was so much mistaken in his nature as to keep a quiet watch at certain places in the city, and the result of the parties, Mayor Bishop was requested to furnish the policemen with a description of the parties, he did, without knowing the purpose. At two o'clock on the morrow, a telegraphic dispatch, issued for the first time of the embezzlement, was received at Detroit, Mich., in several hours the start. They could do no better than to wait until daylight, and then take the train they have been carrying out, was.

Mr. West left the office a few minutes before Mr. West arrived at his business house on Friday, Mr. McDonald left the office of the Post Office, took a letter out, and walked leisurely down Fourth street, reading it. While the senior of the firm was being perplexed at the unusual appearance of the books, the junior had obtained knowledge of his return, and hence the alarm. The book-keeper robbed the Burnet House, procured a buggy, and drove to Hamilton, not in time to get the trunks to the C., H. & D. depot, but he had left McDonald his wife to get aboard the cars. Book-keeper proceeded behind to the depot for the purpose of seeing, making arrangements, that the clocks for the same should be delivered on the train to whatever point he chose. Here it is known that McDonald said book-keeper got aboard the cars and Montague and McDonald left the cars, and that McDonald said wife she got on the train alone at Hamilton, and left the city, and of the country horseback, is a very large turnout.

A punctual and full attendance is requested, as business of importance to the society will come before the meeting, and the investigations and discussions will be of more than usual interest to the profession and community.

THE "PANOPTICON."—D. C. LA RUE'S "Panoptikon," being a fully moving mechanical exhibition of the Indian War in India and the Sepoy rebellion, will be opened to the public at Kingsbury Hall next Wednesday evening. This display of art is represented to embrace a combination of 80,000 moving and acting models of men, horses and animals. It is not a panorama, but a mechanical movement, in which the actors but-less between armies, etc., are represented as taking place.

CHANGED HANDS.—We learn that the "Mangus Institute" passed out of the hands of its proprietors on Saturday, and is now the property of this city, yesterday, and became private property. We understand it is the intention of those who have purchased it to make it a boarding school for young ladies. We have noticed this beautiful building when passing on the cars—it very well adapted for a boarding school.

BANNER PRESENTATION.—A beautiful banner was presented to the West side Zouaves at Wheaton Station that last evening by Solomon M. Wilson, Esq. The banner, which is as exceedingly neat and "Wide Awake" affair, is adorned by the "W., and gotten up by Messrs. Chambers & Stanborn. It represents "Old Abe," a very good oil portrait, with "Abe" legislator on one side and a Wide Awake on the other. It is surrounded by a large kerosene torch, smaller torches depending from either end of the emblem.

THE NEW IN WRIGHT'S GROVE.—The Sabbath Schools in connection with the Reformed Presbyterian Church of this city intended holding a picnic in Wright's Grove, on Thursday, 16th inst. The place is just outside of the city limits and access lots by the horse-railroad on

The Great Excursion Train.

The great excursion train on the Illinois Central Railroad, to leave this city at 8 o'clock to-night for the grand State Republican rally at Springfield, will probably be one of the most marked features of this campaign; from present promise it will be the largest company that has joined in a single excursion by rail in the Northwest.

It is especially desired that all who are looking forward, to be promptly at the depot in ample season, as the train will leave promptly on time. This great turnout is rendering some of our older Republican residents of Whig proclivities of the campaign of 1840, the "Old Tippecanoe times" when an excursion train that day carried large with this of regularly turned out three hundred strong and in wagons took up their march for the Capitol, singing out by the way at night. They made about thirty-five miles progress daily, and had a big time at Springfield. A number of those who participated in that campaign are expected on the route to Springfield will be on board this train to-night.

The train will reach Springfield leaving Springfield on Thursday morning. John Wright, the celebrated restaurateur of this city, will accompany the excursion with a car fitted up for good eating, and with will not give out by the way nor at Springfield.

On the Alton and St. Louis road trains will be run as hitherto. After from Bloomington and Alton special excursion trains will be run, to return from Springfield after the Wide Awake parade on Wednesday evening.

Meeting of the Chicago Gardeners' Society.

The regular monthly meeting of this Society took place last evening at Bear Hall in Metropolitan Block. The attendance was not large but the meeting was of great interest.

A proposition was received from the Mechanics' Institute, for the Society to unite with them in their forthcoming exhibition. As the terms of union were not definitely stated, a committee was appointed to confer with the officers of the Institute and report to the next meeting.—Messrs. Saunders, Roissig and Kihlere were the committee.

Mr. Perrian of Calumet, read an interesting essay on the Cut Worm, which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. Saunders was appointed to investigate the habits of the cut worm and the insect identifying those found on fruit and forest trees. Also of the Sap-sucker, and report at early day.

Mr. Chase was appointed to investigate the habits of the Quill and report on its economic value to horticulturalists and agriculturalists.

On motion, the regular adjournment for next Saturday next, at 8 o'clock, to consider the propositions of the Mechanics' Institute if any be presented and referred to the committee.

For Springfield.

It may be found that a basket of sandwiches for each mess will not be a bad thing to have at Springfield to-morrow, and perhaps for the city of provender; but if the expectations of our Springfield friends are realized, hams and loaves of bread will be as scarce in Springfield before night to-morrow, as principles in the Democratic party—at any time. Take a basket with you, however, though Gen. Wright is the purveyor of the party, it is well to provide against the expected famine.

The Forthcoming Fair.

The early bird will be the first at Exhibition at the Wigwam, are now open at the rooms of the Mechanics' Institute, 125 Clark street. We are glad to notice a very general and liberal state of proportion in progress among our mechanics, artisans and merchants generally, to have the Industrial Exhibition in the Great Wigwam the finest local Fair ever held in the Northwestern Commonwealth, which would be a credit to any State in the Union. Our citizens generally out of the great depot yesterday morning in a special excursion train of five cars on the Mich. Cent. R. R. to Niagara Falls and return. They are to leave for Niagara Falls this morning. The period of their period of return to this city is said to be uncertain.

INQUENTS.

DIED OF THIRST FOR WHISKY.—An inquest was held yesterday by Coroner James, at No. 17 White street, upon the body of a woman named Mrs. Morgan Kane. The husband of deceased, who is a soldier, went to Buffalo three weeks since, leaving his family in charge of a friend, Mr. Bohon. On Sunday evening Mr. B. called in to see her and found her dead in bed, and her two children, three and four years of age, in a state of intoxication. They said their mother was asleep, and had been since the day before. The last time she was seen alive was when they saw her drink a glass of rum the appear

Edgar W. Fowler,	S. B. Walker,
Andrew Conrad,	A. G. Dean,
Joseph Fellows,
Jno. H. Beyer,

The morning is Recorder Wilson's charge to the jury:

CHARGE TO THE GRAND JURY.

Gentlemen of the Grand Jury—The duties you are called upon to perform, often require the exercise of all your integrity and intelligence. Your duties are of a delicate nature, you should have no fear, except that of doing wrong—there are no objects of fear, if your sense of duty is paramount.

Your duties are not of a political character, or predisposed to influence by political feelings, and not prevented from innocently performing your duties. The Tribune and Times and Herald may say that we have been actuated by wrong motives, but we have acted in good faith and faithfulness to the public, in that our course is sustained by bad men, who always lose faithful public servants.

Hold fast to one rule of common sense to whatever you may be called upon to do as jurors, that the public good, and the welfare of our cities on good citizens, and you will always be right.

Whenever any honest man is charged with the commission of a crime he will stand his ground, and at once ask for and demand an examination, and the duty of the public officer upon to take part in administering the law. How different when a guilty party is charged with crime, he will seek every possible means, parties cannot be found, every effort is made to delay the trial, and to get out of the way, all who would faithfully and honestly examine into the truth or falsity of the charge, are at once charged with being prejudiced and undignified. Gentlemen of the Jury, you are always ready to say to others and jur—ry—why if you are not ready to say to others, that you are of our mindscad, we will most cheerfully give you a wide berth.

Often, very often, our religious, political and commercial institutions are misunderstood or evoked, referred to and relied upon by those who are guilty of crime, to shield themselves from their criminal acts. And you will always find that cunning offenders who have others to do their dirty work, are those who are always most likely to be detected, will set to work to cover up their delinquencies, by attempting to throw using their instruments to assume all the responsibility, and thus, by throwing dust in the eyes of those covered their own iniquity, the next step is to destroy your witness, if possible, for it is obvious that any offence has been committed by some one, and it is by this, that the jury must be packed, if possible, and a corpus class of men who understand the law, and the facts, and who may be very innocently called upon to serve as jurors, and yet be prejudiced, and have all the necessary incens of warfare—and to counterbalance such and carries to bring partisan party severe upon all their prisoners who have no friends or means of defence.

Gentlemen of the Jury, you are the single individual who goes forth to break the ice in a hard case—and you are the single individual who are branded together, each one to pay his part in the expense of the trial, and if the jury of three are harmless compared to those who are guilty of crime, and who are those who they have sworn to support, and to take away from them the power to do evil, they have sworn to protect.

We all know from past experience how easy it is to send off by screw the per unfortunate criminals, and how difficult it is to bring to justice those who commit the gravest offences, and those who are associated with official authority. This ought not to be so, and it will not always continue to be so, if every one who is called upon to take part in the administration of the law, shall act faithfully and fearlessly.

I know that it is a very easy matter to believe that all who are prejudiced against crime, are those who are guilty of crime, and those who are concerned in that they are legally dissatisfied to do their duty, but I hope, I know, that such doubts prevail, courts and juroors would be of no use, and would be a mere mockery, and a waste of time and money. Gentlemen, I will detain you no longer, and allow the latter to escape, will never be the offender of the law, and the law, and the law, which would punish the instrument used in the commission of crime, and yet, the law, which allows criminals to escape is alike reprehensible, and to wrongdoers.

We have for many years heard and seen much of the Detectives, but I am not prepared to say that it would be wrong for the Detectives to go so far as to condemn a person who has been guilty of crime, and who has been guilty of such bad qualities. I have never heard of any one who has been guilty of such bad qualities, and guilty than themselves into the commission of crime, and who has been guilty of the crime, condemned by all.

At the short term of this Court, a man named Clark, a convict from the Penitentiary of this State, was convicted of the crime of larceny of a horse of prostitution, to this city. There was evidence to show that the prisoner was so drunk that this house was kept by the direction of the Mayor, and the prisoner was kept in the house

The Garibaldi Concert and the Zouave Reception.

CHICAGO, AUG. 3, 1860.

ERNEST S. PRUDHO, Esq., Chairman Committee of Arrangements of Garibaldi Concert—Dear Sir: Nothing in our papers that the friends of the heroic Garibaldi propose giving a Concert at the Wigwam on Friday, the 10th inst., I would respectfully suggest a postponement of the same, for the reason that should the arrival of our expected Zouave Cadets, now looked for on Thursday evening, be not, the Concert will not deferred to the following evening (Friday) it would probably clash with the proper interest we all entertain in the object of your Concert. I therefore suggest the propriety, under those circumstances, that you postpone the said Concert to a more propitious time, and I shall be happy to join with you in all the other business of your Concert.

WIDE-AWAKE.

The Texas Preacher.

NORTHERN CROSS, TEXAS, Aug. 4, 1860.

Editors Press and Tribune:

I gave of the manner in which you speak of Blunt and McKinney that you are laboring under a mistake with regard to them. Mr. Blunt, (William is his proper name), lives in Liberty and was at my house last night. I have been personally acquainted with him seventeen seventeen years, and I know that he is not a pro-slavery man, and has been, in the kind of language discribed, a friend of Freedom, in ways taking the ground that the Bible sanctions slavery.

I should like to give you a history of the Texas Conference, so given by himself, but I have not time to do so. Blunt and McKinney are Baptists (Dough-face) preachers and not Methodist and are both pro slavery men and known as such in Texas. Blunt has not been in Texas within the last six months.

THOMAS L. LINDAY.

Douglas's Chickens Coming Home to Roost.

It turns out that three of the most prominent Douglas men, the Hons. of Alabama John Forsyth, Buchanan and Parsons, voted for the $200,000 military resolutions passed by the last Legislature, and now frequently referred to by the Douglas papers in the North, in evidence of the dissension plans afoot in the Southern Slave States.

What are we to infer from this? That at the time of their passage, Mr. Douglas expected to be the candidate of and to act with the dissatisfiers? It would be interesting to know what he expressed of dissatisfaction and of the dissensions he then saw all saddled by his fellow to rest on the dissatisfaction's vote in the Charleston and Baltimore Conventions.—N. Y. Evening Post.

N. P. Willis on Chicago.

N. P. Willis of the N. Y. Home Journal has been making a few week's excursion out West, His last letter is from Chicago, which he is disposed to describe in flattering terms. But in speaking of the growth of this city, in population he falls into a great error. He says it has increased in ten years from 5,000 inhabitants to 200,000, which is a mistake of more than 25,000 in the 200 in ten years, which is fast enough to satisfy moderate people. He describes the Wigwam as a "marble dome, upon which is seated a Goddess. It is the largest and most prominent structure ever built, in the Union, for the purpose of a single political campaign.

We take a few extracts from his letter:

The first object of interest which caught my eye, in a drive before breakfast, was a beautiful church, built apparently in architectural holidaymorning, the sentiment, that in its way, produced this impression—a light gray stone, which, with some ornament in the style of a luminous cone, the trickling of which, turning black, have the appearance of a very careful decay of mourning fringe or lace. I can secure no better image than the look of mourning weeds which was given to a house of God, but, in the spaces of the plain where pinnacles and arches rose one element the truest workmanship, it seemed to me, was perfectly appropriate.

A startling effect, at Chicago, for the travel of a day, and a beautiful crossing of the principal street by large vessels, and apparently with no more interruption to the moving tide of vehicles than would be made by the bridging of a mill run. The basest quarter of the city is built upon a marshy ground, and, in a great rain, by means of a most ingenious act of great bridges, the merchants which are in the open centre of the town can bring in their ships to unlade opposite the door—the door being the point of a broad thoroughfare one minute, in the last minute shifting round to let a large vessel go past, and in double-minute restoration to the place again. I had wondered at the ease and watch the operation of one of these beautiful machines, and it is, I repeat, still more wonderful to find it part of the perspectives of different streets, and apparently in different parts of shipping and cart-horses were moving equally well over and the paved thoroughfare.

But Chicago, though its name is another word for Western, equally with Philadelphia, is always as the prominent instance of pioneer go-ahead in our country—does not look like a city of the West. The population in the street here, in Chicago, is, it seems to me, alike of dress, manner or physiognomy—none of the characteristics for which the other towns of the West, on the way thither, note and more prepare you. In Philadelphia this is almost literally a settlement of New Englanders exclusively. Every one is shrewd, lazy, thrifty, careful and respectable—no one with any time or curiosity to give his neighbor a cue at all dishonest or dangling in his gait of movements, no swagger and recklessness of dress, countenance or behavior. Yet, more widely separated from Philadelphia than a Westerner and a New-Englander could scarce be found, yet most of the people of Chicago would look quite at home in the streets of conscientious and cordial Boston.

The Germans Deserting Slave Democracy in Scores.

We are informed by one of the proprietors of a manufacturing establishment in Ohio, in which employes forty-five men, nearly all of whom are Germans, and who, to a man, are heretofore voted the Democratic ticket—that there are not but three men in the whole number who have not declared for Lincoln. This is one of the significant signs of the times. The Germans have become disgusted with the false and hollow-hearted pretensions of the leaders of the so-called Democracy, and are determined to cut loose from the unnatural alliance and vote the honest sentiments of their hearts—for Lincoln and Freedom.—Dalmatian (Ohio) Journal.

To his resources of all sorts there are constantly coming in the most liberal contributions. Baron Ricasoli has just made him a present of 800 stand of arms, and others are giving in a similar proportion.

WHY PRICES WILL BE LOW.

The strongest perversity of this adversity of that commercial policy which requires a famine in Europe or short crops at home, to give our farmers remunerative prices for their labor, admits of no explanation. In 1859 the ground groans beneath the weight of the crops, east and growing. But if the European harvest is not destroyed by cold and rain, and if the effects of the drought in the Southern States are not as severe as are now anticipated,—what, we ask, will the contents of Western granaries and cribs be worth to the men who have toiled early and late to fill them up? The object of the government under successive Democratic administrations has been to discourage manufactures and stimulate agriculture and commerce. This has been done by the Southern, the ruling power, has found her gain therein. But the consequences to the North, often foretold, will soon be seen. There is a surplus of food. For the last three years the crop is full, and so great is the number driven from manufacturing pursuits to agriculture, by the press of foreign competition, that the increased demand and concurrence were so large before. The surplus regulates the price; and if no foreign demand arises, that price will open the eyes of the West to its superior necessity, of such an alteration of our commercial policy as will bring the workshops of the artisan and the fields of the farmer side by side—that will afford not only protection to the fabric of their mutual exchanges, but a home market for everything that the farmer may produce—and that will withdraw a part of the men now engaged in the cultivation of the soil, and convert them into laborers in a new and more profitable field. If the market price of wheat is but fifty, and if corn but twenty cents per bushel, is it not wise and well for the farmer to remember that the difference between what they receive and what they have earned is a tribute that they pay to the slaveholders of the South for maintaining the government, solely for their own benefit; and that nothing but the election of a Republican President and a revision of the tariff, will prevent more unusualive prices whenever crops are full, or even fair.

DOUGLAS AND THE WILMOT PROVISO.

We have said, again and again, that the position of the Republican party on the slavery question is identical with that held by both political organizations prior to the division in the Democratic party of the dogma of Calhoun. The history of our National legislation shows that the power of Congress under the Constitution to prohibit the introduction of slavery into the territories, was conceded at the South as well as at the North, by Democrats as well as Whigs—that it was often acted upon and never objected to. The opposition doctrine was first broached by Mr. Calhoun in 1847; and there has never been an instance in which the enunciation of it has been met with more marked or more universal reprobation in Congress than that which greeted Mr. Calhoun's theory of the Constitution. It was condemned alike by the leaders of both political parties. Clay and Webster were no more emphatic in their denunciation of it than were Benton and other leading Democrats.

During the excitement growing out of the acquisition of territory at the close of the Mexican war, the Democracy of every free State committed themselves strongly in favor of the prohibition of slavery in the country so acquired. The Democracy of Illinois, with Mr. Douglas at its head, formed no exception. In 1849, the Legislature of this State was strongly Democratic, and in January of that year, the following joint resolution was carried in both the House and the Senate:

Resolved, By the Senate of the State of Illinois, the House of Representatives concurring, that our Senators in Congress be instructed and our Representatives requested to use their influence to prevent the introduction of slavery into the Territory of California, or any other Territory now free, by repealing the Mexican law, or by any other means, or by the adoption of the Wilmot proviso, or by any other means, or by any other means, or by any other means

States committed themselves strongly in favor of the prohibition of slavery in the country to the people. The Democracy of Illinois, with Mr. Douglas at its head, formed no exception. In 1849, the Legislature of this State was strongly Democratic, and in January of that year, the following point resolution was carried in both the House and the Senate:

Resolved, By the Senate of the State of Illinois, the House of Representatives concurring, that our Senators in Congress be instructed and our Representatives be requested, to use all honorable exertions which may promote the enactment of such laws by Congress as may effectually prohibit the introduction of Slavery in the Territories, Provinces, and settlements of the Republic of Mexico, succeeded Feb. 2, 1848, &c. "shall contain the express declaration that it shall be prohibited in the Territory aforesaid, and Territories, once than in the Republic of Mexico, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted."

Mr. Douglas was at that time a member of the United States Senate. How did he receive the instruction? Of Course, those who are familiar with his record and his speeches since 1854, will suppose that he at once indignantly resigned his seat and appealed to the people. Not at all. On the contrary, he told the Legislature that they had done a very foolish thing in instructing him to vote for a measure which his record proved him to be in favor of. He really seemed to be hurt at the lack of confidence in his political consistency and in his devotion to the well known principles of the Democracy, implied in the resolution of instruction. He gave expression to this feeling in a speech which he delivered at Springfield, on the 3d of October 1849, and from we make the following extract:

In August, 1848, he (Mr. Douglas) had voted for the Oregon bill, containing a clause prohibiting slavery in that Territory. Two months afterwards, the Legislature assembled and passed resolutions instructing their Senators, and requesting our Representatives in Congress, to vote for Territorial bills for Florida and New Mexico containing a prohibition of slavery in the Territories, in other words they instruct him to do precisely what I had done a few months before. I had been informed that his Whig friends, and, perhaps, a Whig caucus, had denounced the vote already expected him to resign rather than obey those instructions. It would be disgraceful to disappoint them in so reasonable an expectation. It was a matter of pride, however, requiring grave and deliberate consideration, whether he could honorably do the act, whether instructed or not, which he had just done without instructions. As the decision of so important a question required time to consider, he invited them to wait and see.

This was a declaration, as clear as language could make it, that it was the settled purpose of Mr. Douglas to disobey the admonition of the resolution of instruction by the Legislature, to vote in accordance with that resolution; and that the Legislature had, gratuitously, gone out of its way to express an implied aspersion on a lack of confidence in his integrity as a man and a Senator. But Mr. Douglas obtained new light during the following winter. Perhaps he had even been instructed to keep the Collodion brewing, that the Constitution confers Slavery into the Territories, and in due time to raise his "ruffled hand" against that time-honored compact, the Missouri Compromise. At all events, he had resolved to make the Legislature responsible for a vote which he had said in the preceding October he would have given without instruction. There is an extract from his speech in the Senate on this subject:

"My hands are tied upon one isolated point," (instructions) "but I shall feel perfectly relieved in 1854 to vote for prohibiting slavery in the Mexican Territory."

A Senator—Can you not break loose?

Mr. Douglas—I have no desire to break loose. My opinions are my own, and I shall express them. I am not belonging to those who sent me here, and to whom I am responsible. I have never differed with my constituents during seven years I have been in Congress, except upon one solitary question. And even on that I have no knowledge of differing from them. I previously votes given the same vote under precisely the circumstances which I now required of my hands. I have no desire, therefore, to break loose from my instructions." Speech in the Senate, March 15, 1850. Cong. Glob. App., Vol. 3, part 4, page 372.

Even here, after Mr. Douglas had resolved to remove the responsibility of the vote he was about to give, from his own shoulders, he still expressed the opinion that the constitutionality of prohibition. But having once passed the barrier, with his eye fastened upon the Presidency, and the propitiation of the South seeming necessary to secure his aim, how rapid has been his descent! How swiftly usually he broke down the barriers erected by patriots against the extension of slavery—how earnestly he prepared the proper apparatus for the Dred Scott decision, a virtual amendment of the federal constitution, for the spread of slavery—how proudly he boasted in Old Kentucky of the South, that he had been instrumental in converting free territory five times the size of New York into slave territory, carrying the institution a degree and a half further north than the south had ever claimed—and how determinedly he stands upon the declaration contained in the Wickliffe resolution, that the decision of the Supreme Court that Dred Scott case should be enforced "with promptness and fidelity by every branch of the government, and by every citizen." (Cheers.)

Mr. Douglas says that the Dred Scott decision gave to the slave owner power to carry his slaves into the Territories and hold them there as property; he says again that the people of a Territory may exclude slavery by unfriendly legislation; and he says he declares that the decisions of the Supreme Court must be implicitly followed. Do you understand him? He says this! [Roars of laughter.]

"No Democrat can vote for the Republicans. Do you know why? Not because of anything our principles require, for there is nothing in them to it. Not because of our old rickety bugs, for we have never injured them. Why? Because Northern Abolitionists, Northern Whigs, and Northern Know Nothings have taken possession of the Republican concern. A Southern gentleman may vote for the Republicans, but he must first go home and be confessed to be personally, when I questioned him, that he had never read a Black Republican speech." [Laughter and cheers.] The election of Abe Lincoln will disunite the Union, and I have no doubt some will come back and that intend to do our part to fight; and fighting for the rights of peace as it was fought in Congress against slavery restriction. (Cheers.) Drive in the Abolitionists, and the Union is safe. We will pull power, and the work is done. (Great applause.)

Former Congressman closed with one of his very powerful speeches. Speaking of Illinois I see in him a resemblance to old Major Selwyn, of Pennsylvania, who, in 1848, was called to come out of this contest as D. Glancy Jones did, shall be remembered hereafter—that's all. Designs are surely right; and the farmers of the Northern tier are not fools that they are.

There was a large and enthusiastic meeting in the evening, which I was told was far larger than any Douglas meeting had been held in this city. "Big great principle" is about played out. Republicans of Northern Illinois, do your duty, and the other portions of the State will do their duty. We shall gain Illinois, Mouldrie county.

A ROUSING MEETING AT SHELBYVILLE.

Make Way for Shelby County.

(Correspondence of the Press and Tribune.)

SHELBYVILLE, Ill., August 1, 1860.

There has been no soaking rain here for a month, and the dust and heat are very annoying. The thermometer has ranged from 90 to 110 feet high—the tallest and best proportioned one I have seen this year.

Douglas is now in this county to call himself a Republican; now they come out and by the hundred, and openly declare that they will vote against anyone until the country is gloriously redeemed. They are preparing the pro-slavery men at every point, and are making converts to the cause in towns that they have a large majority to overcome; but it is growing beautifully less.

The pro-slavery men have for several days been industriously spreading reports of defeats in town; and many hundreds have been kept back from meeting, the trick show that the results are scared. The court-house clique in this county would put to shame a den of thieves; they would astonish them with new phases of depravity.

Judge Trumbull stopped over night with Mr. Ward, about five miles from here, and was this morning escorted into town by 40 mounted Wide Awakes. At the Shelby house he was received by two or three hundred citizens, and Mr. Martin addressed him in a very little speech, reminding him of the meager and dispirited crowd he addressed at this place in 1858. The Senator's speech was one of the most beautiful and touching passages I have yet heard. Everybody was deeply affected; and when he concluded, not a dry eye was to be seen.

There was too much dust to form a procession, and the people assembled in the grove where the Douglas meeting was held in 1858. Buchanan best Fremont in Shelby county by a vote; the Republican meeting to day was twice as large as any Democratic meeting, and the pro-slavery men cannot make such a show. Do you want any better proof that Shelby is wheeling into line? The Douglas majority of nearly 900 in 1856 will this year be reduced to 400 or 500; and one more such effort will wipe even that out.

I shall give only a few brief sketches of Judge Trumbull's speech. The Dred Scott case, said he, was made by Democrats of both sections as finally settling the question of the right of slaveholders to take their slaves with them into the Territories. Now, it settled no such point. The decision merely settled, as a dogma, not being a citizen, had no right to sue in Mob Court, and then went on to say how it would have decided the question if it had properly presented. This way of rendering decisions is well a man should go before a Justice of the Peace and complain that he was a citizen of South-ern rights!

"Have we the fruits of this principle which the Senator from Mississippi regards as hostile to the rights of the Southern States? Look over yet any other fruits that were more palatable to your taste or refreshing to your feelings? What other fruit of free territory has been conferred upon the Southern States? Look over the tomes, since the Revolution, except in New Mexico and California, and Texas, and the intervention affirmed at Charleston, of an act of Congress that has ever conferred upon you all that you claim? Has any other process been given, which comparatively matters and cold winters where slavery can not exist? No, cannot you trust the same principle further South, when you come to acquire additional territory from Mexico, which was surrounded on nearly every side by free territory? will not the same principle protect you in the Northern States of Mexico when they are acquired, since they are now surrounded by free territory; are several hundred miles further South; have many degrees of greater heat; and have a climate and soil adapted to Southern products? Are you not satisfied with these practical results?" Douglas' Speech in the Senate, May 16th, 1860.

Arkansas Politics.

KEOKUK PRESS AND TRIBUNE: CANTON, Aug. 4th 1860.

The sycophants of Arkansas politics in Iowa are in the dumps. Yesterday, Yesterday, Yesterday, they were in high glee, because they could do the Hon. Abraham Lincoln, great injustice, by representing him as a Douglas Democrat. The Little Rock Democrat, the organ of the Democratic candidate, is one of State policy in regard to internal improvements and State debts. Both Democratic candidates are Douglas men—nor is there, to the writer's knowledge, a single candidate before the people opposed to acknowledging Douglas sovereignty.

Yours,

ARKANSAS.

Kicking at a Dead Lion.

KEOKUK PRESS AND TRIBUNE:

The Eureka Herald, of Saturday last, contains the following editorial notice:

"Republicans—Look out for Mr. Lincoln's friends, lest he shall be illy favorably for the Republican ticket, and Douglas Democrats—look out for the friends of Douglas, lest they shall be induced to vote for the Republican ticket.

A. J. Judge is to preach at the Wheaton tomorrow, at 10 o'clock. Democrats, Republicans, Douglas men, all are invited, that he may exemplify the cheerful acquiescence in the Divine will.

The import and design of these hereinbefore editorial notices, at the time, must certainly be mistaken by the voters of the Second Congressional District—Mr. Lincoln's friends connected with Mr. Arnold's nomination.

Perhaps the phrase, "Who owns the Druid?" there is enough, more than enough, outside of the well known Mr. Arnold, notice of Farnsworth in this district, to render it not only unnecessary, but inexpedient, for the friends of Mr. F. to fire out or seven counties in this district, "Who owns the Druid?" Perhaps claims to have been nominated. A respectably numerous portion of this district, is Republican. The last little scene, it indirectly and unnecessarily, represents the Republicans, as the producer dissatisfied with the Democrat.

Democrats, who have withdrawn from the concession from brawn upon the resistance rotation to the high mountain's struggling bosom, is this and that.

Here is about houses should never be too hasty in throwing stones.

We can attest that he enumerates the cheerful acquiescence in the will of the people." Hah! Majority! How obtained? Majority! Two one gap in the ticket made or a majority of outside buckets. Majority!!!

KANE.

(CORRESPONDENCE.—We print the above not because the comment is warranted by the text, but because a Republican who writes it is in good humor, and desires to ventilate himself in words rather than deeds. We do not think the Democrat, if called, he promise to publish an article in reply to the Republican, because Lincoln's speeches, that the Republicans are many designate. This offer is a fair and reasonable one, and we promise that our neighbor will have no reason to accept it. Here is the extract in question:

"It is a page of the history of the country that under the Democratic Administration, at the time that you delight to call repeater sovereignty, that the Democratic party passed a law that produced slavery in the whole of that Territory, under Congress, and that was conceived a crowd free territory into slave territory more than at any time since the formation of the Union. Under this doctrine slavery has been extended from a few counties in Missouri, to the whole of Kansas, the loss of the Republic of Mexico, not only up to the Missouri line, but up to the parallel of 36 degrees and a half more slave territory than ever before. In 1821 and 1845 and 1850, you only asked to have the line of 36 degrees and 30 minutes, and you did not do, and its ultimatum, I offered it in the Senate in 1854, and it was then adopted here, but rejected in the House of Representatives. I have gone up to 36 degrees 30 min., and non-intervention has given you slave territory up to 36 degrees and a half more than you asked, and yet you complain that this is a sacrifice of Southern rights!

"Have we the fruits of this principle which the Senator from Mississippi regards as hostile to the rights of the Southern States? Look over yet any other fruits that were more palatable to your taste or refreshing to your feelings? What other fruit of free territory has been conferred upon the Southern States? Look over the tomes, since the Revolution, except in New Mexico and California, and Texas, and the intervention affirmed at Charleston, of an act of Congress that has ever conferred upon you all that you claim? Has any other process been given, which comparatively matters and cold winters where slavery can not exist? No, cannot you trust the same principle further South, when you come to acquire additional territory from Mexico, which was surrounded on nearly every side by free territory? will not the same principle protect you in the Northern States of Mexico when they are acquired, since they are now surrounded by free territory; are several hundred miles further South; have many degrees of greater heat; and have a climate and soil adapted to Southern products? Are you not satisfied with these practical results?" Douglas' Speech in the Senate, May 16th, 1860.

The Senator left no hole for the squatters to crawl out of. Douglas has accompanied by a number of his friends, left the Democratic party, and was unable so to their propositions or opinions. "Free territory, free labor, free men, free of Irish cumse, or reported violence." Hurrahing, objected to nobody nor asked any questions, which he explained, returned to his home, and he announced his success of the party.

Then the jury was then empanelled, the State's witness was called, and the jury was sworn, they had not proved.

Judge Douglas, the Democratic party, could not make the hours.

Mr. Douglas, the Democratic party, witnesses would be there, in an hour or two at the Court House, and the Democratic party, to be sure, and the Judge ordered the jury to find a verdict of "Not Guilty." Hurrahing, the jury was discharged, before Judge Douglas, the Democratic party, witnesses, and the Democratic party, turnable.

Judge Douglas had done his duty, he would have prevented the packing of the jury with Black Republicans, if the Judge had not done. Most of the jury were Democrats, sympathetic and anxious to get home, and when they were sworn, and he again escaped into a body of the Democratic party, and he had to return to the Court House, and he had to wait for the jury, returned to the Court House, and he had to wait for the jury, returned to the Court House, and he had to wait for the jury, returned
